Peter Rabbit couldn't get over his discovery that Old Mr. Toad could sing: and not only that, but that his song was one of the sweetest of all the glad springtime. Ever eince he was a little chap and had first run away from home he had known Old Mr. Toad, and never once had suspected that he could sing. In fact, he had looked on Old Mr. Toad as such a homely fellow as to be almost ugly looking, and he knew that most of his neighbors looked on Old Mr. Toad as such a homely fellow as to be almost ugly looking, and he knew that most of his neighbors looked on Old Mr. Toad and attended strictly to his own affairs, but they liked to poke fun at him, and as for there being anything beautiful about him. why, it never entered their heads that such a thing could be.

Now that they had discovered that he really had a very beautiful volce, they began to look on him with a great deal more respect. This was especially so with Peter. He couldn't get over his first surprise. He got in the habit of going over to the Smiling Pool every day when the way was clear, just to sit on the bank and listen to Old Mr. Toad.

FOXHOUND PACK

Gives Sample of Its Ability in Demonstration at Dog Show.

Today's feature at the show of the Washington Kennel Club, being held in the old Walker-Hughes market building, 1120 Connecticut avenue, was the exhibition by the Piedmont pack of foxhounds, attended by the M. F. H., and Huntsman in full hunting regalia. The hounds trailed an anise bag in and out and up and down stairs through the big building, illustrating as closely as possible in the restricted quarters the manner in which a well trained pack follows the drag in a crosscountry run.

Judging in several classes began early this morning and continued throughout the day. Attendance at the show this morning and this afternoon was estimated at close to 1,500, the total attendance yes at close to 1,500, the total attendance yesterday being given as more than 2,000. According to the judges the best bulldog in the show—the champion of the breed and best in all classes—is Black Jack, owned by the Drewstone kennels. The champion Boston bull terrior is the Whistler, owned and shown by John W. Keegan of this city.

While judging the Boston terriers last night Herman Brennung, jr., of Boston was bitten through the hand by one of the first dogs he handled. Mr. Brennung continued to work until he had finished judging the class, although his hand was badly lacerated. Miss Ann Tracy a niece of J. Pierpont Morgan, showed her Eskimo dog as an added feature of the show last night, the dog being awarded a blue ribbon.

Mr. Brennung continued to work until he had finished judging the class, although his hand was badly lacerated.

Miss Ann Tracy a niece of J. Pierpont Morgan, showed her Eskimo dog as an added feature of the show last night, the dog being awarded a blue ribbon.

Much interest has been shown in the dachshund entries, most of which are from a Long Island kennel. Fred C. Havens of Point Pleasant, N. J. has several exceptionally fine Airedales in the show. "Closeburn Chancellor," Scottisht deerhound, owned by Miss Nellie Flournoy, Bethesda, Md., was the only representative of that breed in the show and was of sufficient class to be awarded all the ribbons and specials offered for dogs af this breed. Bulldogs make up a large class, these entries attracting a great deal of attention. In the foxhound classes the Pledmont Hunt Club's entries captured all ribbons except those for English foxhounds, which were awarded to the entries of the Riding and Hunt Club of Washington.
